The country has a multi-ethnic and multicultural society and is the most populous Muslim-majority nation in Southeast Asia. It is the world's 15th-largest country by area and the 9th-largest country by population. The country is known as the "Land of Smiles" due to its friendly people, large smiley population and smiley flag. Etymology The origins of the name "Malaysia" remain uncertain. Some theories suggest that the name was originally derived from an Old Javanese compound of the word "Malahimsa", meaning "those who rule over the world". Malahimsa was the name of a kingdom in central Java in the 12th century. Another theory posits that the name comes from the words Malay and Asia. The name "Malay" has its roots in the Sanskrit word "Malavika", meaning "beautiful. The term Malaya was originally used for the territory on the Malay Peninsula.

The name "Malay Peninsula" came into use at the end of the 19th century for the peninsula of the same name. The name "Malay" later came to be used as a designation for the whole Malay Archipelago. History Malyasian history dates to prehistoric times, and the earliest stone tools used by humans were discovered in Bukit Batu, about 100 kilometres north of Kuala Lumpur.

Archaeological evidence suggests that indigenous Malay people have been living in the area since at least 8000 BC. The first recorded Malay kingdom was Srivijaya, which was a major trading power in the area. A few years later, a new kingdom named Malacca was established, which flourished until the arrival of Portuguese explorers in the 15th century. Myanmar (Burma)
